The Harmony art show embodies what has given each artist a sense of harmony during a year-plus of isolation and discord. For some, it was listening to music and or observing nature. Others took up cooking or stayed connected with friends in socially distanced manners. The art in the show reflects each artist's representation of what Harmony means to them, spanning from realism pieces to abstract works. In total, there are 70 paintings in the exhibit – half from Cedars artists and half from other Bay Area artists.
